

C DPM*Records of Hull Magistrates Court*c.1836-1995

Historical background: Magistrates courts are the lowest level of courts in England, and is where almost all criminal proceedings start. Hull was first granted the right to appoint its own magistrates, also known as Justices of the Peace (JPs), to deal with the summary cases, in 1440. More serious offences or indictable crimes would be passed to the quarter sessions or to the county assize, for capital cases. Despite the abolition of the old municipal corporation in 1836, the reformed borough was still able to select its own magistrates and hold its own courts, sometimes also known as police courts or petty sessions. This system continued until the reforms of the 1971 Courts Act, where the magistrate's courts remained at lowest level, with the quarter sessions replaced by crown courts. The magistrate's courts could also hear some civil cases, when county courts were established under the County Court Act 1846. They had jurisdiction over the recovery of debts and civil actions up to certain financial limits, including bankruptcy.

Custodial History: The first group of records transferred to the City Archives were selected by the Clerk to the Magistrates at the Hull and Holderness Magistrates Courts in 1986, with another series of licensing records, C DPM/24 and C DPM/43-44, transferred in September 1993. C DPM/47 was transferred in January 2008 from the Hull County Court. C DPM/5/10-12, C DPM/7/37-39, C DPM/24/2-5 and C DPM/48-49 were transferred in December 2016 from the Hull and Holderness Courts.

Description: Includes minute books, materials relating to Licensing, papers regarding court cases, bankruptcy registers, court registers, various committee minutes books and various cause books.

Related material: Further records relating to the work of the Courts can be found at C CQB, the records of the Hull Quarter Sessions.

Access Conditions: Access will be granted to any accredited reader. However, a large number of records are not available for public inspection for 100 years due to their sensitive nature. Please see the catalogue regarding which items come under this category. For court registers from 1989-1995 please see staff regarding access. Items at C DPM/1/76- C DPM/1/102 can only be viewed on microfilm. See catalogue for details.
