U DDSY2/12/8 Report by W Ormesby-Gore (to Lord Robert Cecil) on 10 Jun 1917
a visit to him by Mr Malcolm (of the Armenian Committee) and Dr Chiam Weizmann. Both excited and angry, and protesting against any proposal of the British government to allow Morgenthau, Aubrey Herbert, Adam Samuel Block and Marmaduke Pickthall to arrange a separate peace with Turkey, and a proposed mission by Herbert to that end. Malcolm had obtained information on these at a 'treasonable and seditious' meeting at Caxton Hall addressed by Pickthall, who was 'openly talking about an early peace'; and reported Herbert and his friends 'openly bragging that they were about to arrange a separate peace with Turkey'. Weizmann denounced Morgenthau and Block (describing Morgenthau as 'a renegade Jew of Galician origins, who would do all he could to prevent the realisation of a British Protectorate of Palestine...notoriously pro - German and...acted with and on behalf of an international ring of Jewish financiers in Hamburg, Berlin, Vienna, Paris and New York...violently hostile to Great Britain and Zionism'); and revealed that the Germans through Dr Lepsius had recently approached the Zionists with a view to coming to terms with them (it was 'really a question of whether the Zionists were to realise their aims through Germany and Turkey or through Great Britain'). Weizmann 'of course, was absolutely loyal to Great Britain' and said that the overwhelming majority of Jews throughout the world were in favour of a British Protectorate of Palestine.

All rebels have left Edinburgh for England. Does not hear that there are any forces on the west road to stop them. About 1,700 of them went to Peebles two days previously. Many who were forced to join them have deserted, and estimated strength 7,000 - 8,000 at most. If Wade has left Newcastle for Berwick, and they head for the West of England, they will have 4 - 5 days start. Fears this unlucky affair will not be over as soon as expected. Rebels left Manchester, where they demanded a large sum, for Wigan on previous day, Cumberland's advance guard of 600 being so near. Threatening to be back in 3 weeks with 5,000 more.

U DDSY3/1/42 Letter from John Neilson, Glasgow
Rebels' aims seem to be either to make for Wales or to fight Cumberland. About 2,000 rebels around Perth. Two regiments of foot, with the remains of Gardner's and Hamilton's dragoons sent from Edinburgh to Stirling to bar them from crossing the Forth. 600 militia sent from Glasgow to Stirling, with Lord Hume as colonel and Lord Glencairn as lieutenant-colonel. Hoping to hear Cumberland has beaten the rebels. Has told Mr. Welfitt that he could not get a vessel to sail from Glasgow to Virginia and Hull under £12 per ton; and sailors would not join it for fear of being pressed at Hull.

Rebels arrived there 23 - 27 December and demanded 6,000 blue bonnets, pairs of shoes and pairs of hose and 1,200 shirts on account of the town militia having been raised and sent to Stirling. Also demanded names of all who went there but were refused. Levied £1,000 on Paisley for being in arms and sending 160 men to Stirling, but settled for £500. Marched away 2 - 3 January taking enough cloth for 2/3rd of their demands and 2 hostages for rest. Their army reviewed on the Green 30 December. Very hard on surrounding country for hay, straw and corn, and few paid for victuals or drink. Had 3 officers and 6 privates billeted on him. They behaved civilly enough though plenty of stealing in the town under pretext of searching for arms. Rebels thought to have gone to Stirling to secure a passage over the Forth. Many had been forced to join, and will desert once over the Forth. About 5,000 - 6,000 came from England '1/3 of whom I believe might be as good Men as in any Army in Europe, 1/3 of them I believe would pass in any Army in Brittain, the rest of them seemed to be a most despicable crew as ever Bore Arms'. A good part of Wade's army now in Edinburgh and hoped they will be joined by 2,000 - 3,000 from Argyll who have reached Dumbarton. General Hawley and Cobham's Dragoons have joined the rest of the army at Falkirk and are within 4 miles of the rebels. 'There may be some action tomorrow', but wishes it were deferred until rest of King's forces come up, another regiment of horse and two of foot being expected. 200 militia from Argyle in town, to march for Falkirk tomorrow, and more expected to follow. 6 regiments of foot, the remains of Gardner's and Hamilton's dragoons and 13 companies of volunteers from Glasgow and Paisley marched from Edinburgh to Linlithgow on the 13th, where they surprised 300 foraging rebels from Falkirk, capturing 11 prisoners. 6 other regiments of foot with about 10 cannon also gone from Edinburgh to Linlithgow; and Colonel Campbell with 900 militia from Argyllshire marched there from Glasgow on the 14th. Hawley still at Edinburgh, believed waiting for 2 regiments of horse. Rebels, about 6,000, about Stirling and Bannockburn and seemed determined to stand for battle. If they crossed the Forth, half of them would desert. Most of the men and a good many officers were heartily weary of the enterprise when at Glasgow. They had been forced into war by their masters and only wanted to get home again

Sending copy of letter from Berwick (19 January) giving news of battle of Falkirk (began at 3.30 p.m. and lasted until 6.00 p.m. Violent storm of wind and rain in faces of our troops. Our cannon never discharged and 7 captured by rebels. Huske beat back main body of rebels and made safe retreat to Linlithgow with luggage about 7.00 p.m. Rebels kept field of battle. Ligonier's dragoons retrieved their honour. Our casualties not above 300, rebels three times that. 'Battereau's, Wolf's and the old Buffs drove them off the field' and would not have quitted it but for the bad weather. Colonels Whitney, Biggar and Stanhope killed, also Lt. West of Ligonier's. Maj. Macdonald captured and sent to Edinburgh, Huske universally extolled. Army retreated to Edinburgh, ammunition wet and spoiled. Rebels said to be not less than 12,000 and outnumbered our army by some thousands)

U DDSY3/1/62 Letter from John Neilson, Glasgow

Battle of Falkirk. About 140 loyalist dead and 3 - 4 times as many rebels. Rebels kept field and captured 7 cannon. They would have had as complete a victory as that over Cope but for Huske, who made a stand with Barrell's, Ligonier's and another regiment of foot, and covered retreat of rest to Linlithgow from where they marched next day to Edinburgh. Our troops' chief trust in guns, rebels in broadswords. Lucky for loyalists that night came on, since storm of wind and rain prevented reloading after first discharge. Storm not so violent at foot of hill where Huske was. Rebels about 7,000; loyalists about 8,000. Hawley much blamed for neglect in drawing up troops and not possessing himself of proper ground. About an hour before the action some officers were riding about asking if anyone knew the moor, and whether there were morasses or ditches. If the army had behaved but tolerably, a complete victory might have been won, for rebels were running away before the battle 'in scores, thirtys and fiftys'. Poor creatures forced into rebellion by masters and chiefs, and only wanting chance to desert. Army now joined with 2 regiments of foot at Edinburgh

No certain account of rebel losses. Young Lochart of Carnworth and Lord John Drummond reported mortally wounded; Sullivan killed. Rebels claiming total victory. Whole of shore of Angus taking up arms for them. Our army behaved shamefully. Only Barrell's and Ligonier's regiments and 4 companies of Battereau's did their duty. All Royal Scots ran away except one grenadier. Mr. Thornton, who hid in the house where Lord George Murray lodged after the battle, has reached Edinburgh safely.

Copy of letter from Falkirk
Rebels abandoned there at 7.00 p.m. previous night, in such precipitous flight that some had passed the fords of the Frew by 7.00 a.m. Whole powder magazine in St. Ninian's Church accidentally blew up about the time their vanguard passed the Forth. Left their heavy cannon mounted against Stirling Castle, and all baggage. Cannon nailed up by then. Dragoons and Argyllshire men, marched to Stirling; rest of troops at Falkirk.

Letter from John and Francis Simpson, Newcastle
Evacuation of Falkirk by rebels, now dispersed in 7 or 8 different columns 'towards the wild dens they spring from'. Reports of some drowned crossing the Forth.

Weather so severe, Cumberland still at Aberdeen with army. Prince of Hesse entered Perth 9 March. Considerable body of rebels marched from Inverness, captured Fort Augustus but repulsed with great loss of Fort William. Pretender sick at Elgin. Some rebel clans offered to submit on terms. Order from Cumberland read from pulpits that all rebels should give in their arms, names and places of abode on a promise of recommendation to royal mercy. Some complied 'and several others fled directly to the Rebels'

No dependable news. Rebels round Inverness claim to be about 8,000 and intend to give Cumberland battle. May dispute passage of the Spey or, keeping moving, give the Duke the slip 'and pay us another visit'. If they do 'we could not be more surprised at it than at their retreat from Derby'.
