Historical background:
The Ogle family has roots in pre-conquest Northumberland, where they had extensive properties including the castles of Ogle and Bothal. They were involved in border battles with the Scots and Lord Ogle was one of the English leaders at the Battle of Flodden. It is possible that the family was involved with the Constable family of Flamborough and that a member of the Ogle family was in the military service of Marmaduke Constable (1443-1518). This may explain why John and Jennet Ogle arrived in Flamborough in the mid-sixteenth century. He died in 1605 and his wife in 1614 (U DOG/11/30).

John and Jennet Ogle had a son, George, in 1566, who served in Ireland with Robert Constable and in the 1630s was a churchwarden at St Oswald's in Flamborough. He died in 1638 leaving three houses, 21 cottages and three closes. Two branches of the family by this time existed and they owned considerable property in Flamborough. George's son, John (b.1605), died prematurely in circa 1638, leaving behind a widow, Thomasina, who did not die until 1696. Their son, also John, was born just before he died, probably in 1637. He had three sons: John (1667-1731), George (1670-1742) and William (1671-1757). George had four children: John, George, Mark and Jane. There are a few papers in the collection from this line of the family, but the bulk are papers of William Ogle, his wife, Elizabeth Jarratt, and their descendants.

William and Elizabeth's son, John Ogle, was born 1702. Their other children included Frances, who married James Harrison. John Ogle married Ann Sawden and were active in the local community; for example, building the spa well. Their eldest son, William (1736-1788) was the second largest landowner in the village after Walter Strickland the lord of the manor. At enclosure in 1767 he and his younger brother, John (1742-1796), received 118 and 169 acres respectively and when he died unmarried this land passed to other members of the family, which now had many branches (U DOG/11/30).

A reasonable proportion of the correspondence and diaries/notebooks in the collection are those of William's younger brother John. John Ogle went into the church. He married first Margaret Rudd (d.1776) and then Martha Furniss (d.1826) by whom he had John Furniss Ogle (b.1781), Charlotte, Harriet and several other children. The other concentration of papers in the collection are those of John Furniss Ogle, who also went into the church. The family letters of their wives are also in the collection and the value of the correspondence lies largely in it being about local and family affairs. This includes some comment about parliamentary elections as well as gossip about smuggling and shipwrecks. John Furniss Ogle married, secondly, Frances Conington, and died in 1850.

Their eldest son, John, followed the evangelical preoccupations of his father, initially preaching locally and building a local infants’ and Sunday school and then a missionary in Algeria before drowning at sea in 1866. His younger brother William (b.1824) was also an evangelical Christian, who went to school at Rugby under Dr Arnold (some mention in letters) and then St Catherine's College, Cambridge, where he was elected fellow. He studied medicine at Edinburgh, Dublin and London before moving in 1860 to Derby where he became physician at Derbyshire Royal Infirmary. He founded the Derbyshire Medical Association in 1862 and the Nursing and Sanitary Institution about which he corresponded with Florence Nightingale. He married Margaret Lambert and had two sons and is largely remembered for being the first to use the term 'immunity' in the medical sense. He was involved in the Young Mens' Christian Association and he died in 1905 in Derby.

The papers of the family do not go beyond this generation, but the Ogles continued to be landowners who dominated the religious life of Flamborough. In 1918 18 cottages and the 181 acre Ocean View farm were sold by the Reverend H L Ogle and only three years later the 97 acre North Moor farm was sold by the Reverend P H D Ogle, ending over 300 years of sizeable landownership in the East Riding.

Custodial History:

Description:
The papers of the Ogle family consist of a few papers related to their estates, about 300 family letters, some diaries, some legal papers and some miscellaneous items. The estate papers are: Bempton (1708, 1761) including a list of cottagers and common rights 1761; Bridlington (1805-1824), a list of title deeds relating to a house at Bridlington Quay; Flamborough (1629-1821) including a resume of the marriage settlement of John Ogle, a plan of North Moor farm, the 1765 enclosure act and award and 1821 marriage settlement of John Furniss Ogle and Frances Conington; Great Kelk and Gembling (1683-1792) including the marriage settlement by lease and release of John Helmsley, apothecary, and Jane Parker, a widow and the 1767 survey and valuation of the estates of the Reverend John Ogle; Hornsea (1719-1794) including title documents, lease agreements and rentals; Sewerby (1637-1767) including papers of the Jarratt family, sale documents and settlements; Yedingham (1740-1784) including a 1741 agreement made between John Ogle, his wife, Ann Sawden, and her brothers William and Richard.

The correspondence and diaries/notebooks largely date from the generation of the Reverend John Ogle (1742-1796), his son the Reverend John Furniss Ogle (1781-1850) their spouses and siblings, with only a few letters pre-dating this period. The legal papers relate to cases in Chancery over estate rights. The miscellaneous papers include a note about the distribution of bibles in Boston, Lincolnshire, in 1813, two bundles relating to the religious careers of John Ogle and his son, John Furniss Ogle, an offprint of the 1959 article of Douglas Hubble about Dr William Ogle that appeared in Medical History and the 1975 typescript of Bertram Ogle giving genealogical details of his family.
