Historical Background: Hull Grammar School (HGS) was endowed by John Alcock, Bishop of Worcester in 1479. The son of a Hull apprenticed merchant, Alcock eventually rose to become lord chancellor. An arrangement with the corporation would allow the property owned by the school to pay the salary of the schoolmaster, who would also be a priest and celebrate mass in the chantry chapel paid for by Alcock. The school was situated on the south side of Holy Trinity Church.

With the suppression of chantries in 1548, the net value of the stipend in effect became nationalised and was paid for by the government until the time of Queen Victoria.

During this period the corporation of Hull gradually resumed control of the school, appointing masters and occasionally buying new books or regulating fees. In 1583 the school moved to a new site, still on South Church side, a site they were to occupy until 1878. The corporation's right to appoint the schoolmaster was confirmed by the charter of King James I in 1611.

The school and the corporation continued to develop close links, although the number of boys in the school fluctuated. When Andrew Marvell attended during the 1630s there were about 100 boys: in 1680 there were only 29. There was also no prescribed time for entering or leaving the school, although 7 or 8 years was generally the rule. William Wilberforce was 7 when he started in 1776. During the late 17th and early 18th centuries, the school experienced some severe financial difficulties as the endowment could not provide enough income. As a result, the master had to rely on ex-gratia payments from the corporation and the fees from the boys, which fluctuated with their numbers.

Another reason for the difficulties the school faced was due to its divided control. In 1836, the old corporation which had governed the school since 1440 was abolished under the terms of the Municipal Corporations Act of 1835. The newly elected town council had responsibility for the appointment of the headmaster and regulations for the conduct of the school. In order to achieve this, a Grammar School Committee was appointed in 1838. But it had no control over the building, the responsibility for which was in the hands of a new municipal charity trust. Neither of these two bodies had the authority to help the school financially.

The school was in a difficult position. The buildings became so dangerous that in 1878 the school had to move to Baker Street, and use the Albion Street Congregational Church schoolroom, which itself had been previously condemned as unsuitable for use as a board school. The Trustees bought land off Beverley Road for a new school in 1862, but protracted delays meant the new building on Leicester Street did not open until 1892.

Four years later, in 1896, saw the corporation gain full control again and the school begin to revive. Recognition by the Board of Education in 1902 allowed the school to receive government grants and local rate aid. This helped end much of its financial insecurities. In 1907 it became fully part of the Hull Local Education Authority although still governed by the council's Grammar School Committee. The Education Act of 1944 made the LEA fully responsible for the school. This became just one part of the new national government's tripartite 'secondary education for all'. In 1953 the school moved to new buildings on what would eventually be called Bishop Alcock Road, on Bricknell Avenue. In 1969 the school became comprehensive, taking boys from 11-18.

Hull History Centre: Hull Grammar School Records

From the 1940s, all schools within the city were grouped into clusters, and in 1946 the Grammar School was initially placed into group 25, along with Beverley Road School. From 1949 until 1959 it became part of a larger grouping, group 9. In 1959 it became part of group 8 and in 1969 the school was in group 6. The local government re-organisation of 1974 saw education transferred from Hull City Council to the newly created Humberside County Council. The re-organisation of Hulls schools in 1988 could have seen the name disappear. The site on Bishop Alcock Road became the new Wyke Sixth Form College, whilst the boys themselves transferred to the former Bricknell High School, now called Bishop Alcock School, on Bricknell Avenue.

On hearing the proposals, a group was formed to try and save the name and traditions of the school. This resulted in the creation in 1989 of a new independent Hull Grammar School, a co-educational school for pupils from 2-18 years and occupying the site of the former Marist College on Cottingham Road. By 1991 the school was in severe economic difficulties and had been acquired by Nord Anglia Education plc from the administrator. In 2004 Nord Anglia sold the school to the Church Schools Company, which also owned Hull High School. The merger of these two schools was announced later that year and in July 2005 the new Hull Collegiate School opened, on the site of the former High School at Tranby Croft.

Related material: As the corporation became more involved with the Grammar School at various stages, then references can be found under the records of Hull City Council and its predecessors. For example at C BRK/1 are early administration records of the school whilst at C BRF/6 are receipts for money paid by the Corporation of Hull relating to the Grammar School. There are also references within the Hull Corporation Bench Books (C BRB). Many of these have been transcribed and these can be found at U DX/28. In addition at U DX/169/28 are extracts specifically relating to the Grammar School from the period 1575-1647. Some records have been listed within Stanewell's Calendar of Documents as well. On open access in the searchroom are the minutes of the Council's Grammar School Committee.

There is much related material within the Tindall Wildridge Collection. This includes historical notes for Wildridge's history of the school, (DMT1/7 and 41/4), his personal correspondence with the headmaster and various events at the school (C DMT/13), published material he collected about the school, (DMT/14) records relating to his and another pupil's time at the school, (DMT/13 and C DMT/15) and his sketches of the buildings. (DMT/23/1-6).

Details of war damage may be found at C TAY/CP/18. Additional records can be found at C BHH/2/105, C TED/1, C TFE/6/3-4, C DMM/21, C DMC/10, C SRL/E/148-149 and within the C DMX collection. For more details please consult the online catalogue and the index cards within the searchroom. At L.373 GRA are copies of 'The Hullensian', the magazine of the Grammar School, April 1921 - July 1982 (with gaps) and 'The Hull Grammar School' written by Reginald W. Corlass. At L.920 MIL is a book about a former headmaster of the school entitled, 'The life of Isaac Milner, comprising a portion of his correspondence and other writings hitherto unpublished' written by his niece Mary Milner.

The Hull History Centre also holds records relating to some former pupils of the Grammar School. For example, the Rev. Thomas Perronet Thompson at U DTH, Thomas Firkbank Sheriff of Hull and Chairman of the Dock Company at C DMX/30 and William Wilberforce at L DFWW.

Other records relating to the various scholarships available to Grammar School pupils can be found at C WFB, the Ferries and Bury's Exhibition and at C WJS, the Jameson Scholarship.

Joseph Milner, the son of Isaac.            2 items	Mid 20th cent.
C DEHG/6/3/1/2	John Dawson Sollit            fl. 1838-1989. A Headmaster who reversed the decline in the schools conditions and standards. Despite being the first non-clerical and non-university head, Sollit made a considerable impact on the school. Most boys left at 14 years of age and often spent only 2 years at the school. The teaching of classics and Latin declined, although Sollit provided an education appropriate for the sons of tradesmen, clerks and other lower professional men in the town, who were not aiming for university. The photographs are reproductions of prints and there is an accompanying letter.            1 item	Mid 20th cent.
C DEHG/6/3/1/3	Henry Earnest Nichol            fl. 1862-1926. Born in 1862, Nichol was the school's music master during the 1890s and composed the school hymn, 'Carmen Hullense' possibly for the opening of the new building on Leicester Street. He gave up his civil engineering degree to pursue a career in music. He wrote many hymns, one of which, 'We've a Story to tell the Nations' is still sung today.            1 item	Mid 20th cent.

C DEHG/6/3/1/4	R. J. Porter                      fl. 1867-1945. Born in 1867, Porter had been a pupil at the school (starting in 1896), before becoming a master in 1899. He resigned as a master in 1945, and afterwards became a school Governor.                      1 item	Mid 20th cent.
C DEHG/6/3/1/5	Rev Charles Ewart Butler                      fl. 1887-1893. Although only Headmaster for 6 years, Butler's contribution was significant. Not only did he manage the move into the new building on Leicester Street despite considerable difficulties, he also modernised the curriculum. He encouraged the school to have a belief in itself and its history. During his tenure team games against other schools, various school societies, the Grammar School Gazette, the badge and uniform and the Old Boys Association were all developed.                      2 items	Mid 20th cent.
C DEHG/6/3/1/6	James Edwin Forty                      fl. 1894-1926. Forty had the second longest tenure as Headmaster, some 33 years. Building on the work of his predecessors, especially Butler, during Forty's time, the school moved from a financially struggling institution (he even at one time paid staff out of his own pocket) to a school full of academic rigour and able to confidently take its place in the city. He realised the new buildings at Leicester Street were inadequate as were staffing levels. Providing a period of stability, Forty expanded both the buildings and the number of staff as well as seeing the school become part of the national education pattern.                      2 items	1920s
C DEHG/6/3/1/7	Frederick M Williams                      fl. 1898-1931. Long term member of staff, Art Master and founder of the school swimming club.                      1 item	1930s
C DEHG/6/3/1/8	Francis A. Drake                      fl. 1899-1928. A Second Master at the school.                      1 item	1920s
C DEHG/6/3/1/9	C. F. Cutsforth                      fl. 1914- 1968. Started as a pupil in 1914. Initially became an Assistant Master in 1921 and was appointed Senior Master in 1963, retiring in 1968.                      1 item	1960s
