

C DMM                      Hull Museums and Galleries collection                      1650-c.2010s
of books, papers, drawings and plans

Historical Background: The origins of Hull's Museums and Galleries lie in the work of the Hull Literary and Philosophical Society and their museum, the Royal Institution on Albion Street. The museum was passed to the Hull Municipal Corporation in 1900 who added an art gallery in the rooms above. Under the enthusiastic drive and direction of curator, Thomas Sheppard, Hull's museums grew throughout the early 20th century and remain an important part of Hull's cultural heritage. The Ferens Art Gallery opened in 1927 after a gift from T.R. Ferens. For the historical and biographical background for the individuals, firms and organisations within the collection, see each specific entry.

Custodial history: Transferred from Hull Museums and the Ferens Art Gallery. Many of these items have a museum deposit reference number beginning with the letters 'DB'. This refers to a day book which was an inventory that Thomas Sheppard, former director of Hull Museums, used. This book was kept in the stores in Albion Street and was destroyed during WWII. Other records have a museum reference number prefixed 'R' or 'M', in the case of items acquired by Arthur Credland, curator of the Hull Maritime Museum. C DMM/13/11 had previously been catalogued as C DEM/57.

Description: Books, papers, deeds, drawings and plans relating to various individuals, firms and organisations

C DMM/13                      The Hull School of Music                      1896-1950
 10 items

Historical Background: The Hull School of Music was founded by Mary Alice Shannah. She was born in 1863, the daughter of William Senyson, a missionary of the Sailor's Institute and Mary Alice, a 33 year old native of Wigan. She is first recorded as a teacher of music at the family home, 22 Reed Street, in 1892. By 1895, she had moved to 21, Storey Street. About this time she married William Henry Simpson who is not recorded locally before taking up residence at Storey Street. In 1898, the school was transferred to 55, Spring Bank. William appears to have left or died in the 1920s but Alice remained at Spring Bank until sometime between 1939 and 1945. During the 1920s she was living with one Phyllis Kirby Hewlett who left to get married in the 1930s. At this point, Alice was joined by Phyllis McGuire at Spring Bank who remained there until the school closed in the mid-1950s.

Related material: A scrap book relating to the school during the period 1897-1930 is available at C DEX/30 whilst at L780.72 is an article on the school, in the Hull Daily News dated 20 Jan 1904.

C DMM/14	The Hull Literary and Philosophical Society Including the Subscription Library and the Royal Institution 7 items	1837-1861

Historical Background: The Hull Literary and Philosophical Society was formed in 1822 following the example of other places such as Newcastle and Manchester. The society developed its own museum, library and organised lectures. In 1854 it purchased a site on Albion Street, which was called the Royal Institution, where it opened it's own museum. In 1900 however, the collection was passed to the City Council as it became too expensive for the society to maintain. In 1943 the building was bombed and much of the collection and library was lost. Some items were recovered though as part of the Phoenix Project in 1989. The Society continues to meet today.

Related material: A history of the society, 'Hull, Lit & Phil and the World' by Margaret Imrie can be located at L.374.23. Other records can be found at C DSLP (1807-1937), C DSL (1822-1937) and at C DMX/323 (1888-1999). Further copies of the Annual Reports can be found at L374.23 with a reference in Local Biographical Sketches (p14) at L920. More information on the origins of the museum and the Phoenix Project please see the Hull Museums Collections website at <http://www.hullcc.gov.uk/museumcollections>. With regard to the Royal Institution there are various newspaper articles and mentions in 'Flashback' (see index cards for more details). In 'Hull Civic News' (No. 34 May 1989 p 7) there is additional information (reference L353). D Lindstrum (in 'Towers and Colonades' p 12-14) at L720 and Paul Gibson's 'Hull Then and Now' (p 37) at reference L9.7 also feature the Royal Institution

C DMM/15	Hull Botanic Garden 2 items	1858-1862

Historical Background: The gardens were originally opened in 1812 on Linnaeus Street but moved to Spring Bank around 1880 before closing in 1890. The Hull born botanist P. W. Watson (1761-1830), and Adrian Hardy Haworth, an entomologist and botanist (1767-1833) were involved in its initial construction

Related material: Records relating to the gardens can be found at C DMM/16, C CQB/209, BHH/2/125, TCC/1 and C TAB. These can be accessed through the street and name indexes in the searchroom. A. H. Haworth was an old boy of Hull Grammar School, whose records can be found at C DEHG. For information on the earlier gardens please see P.W. C DMM/26	The Royal Infirmary, Hull 2 volumes and 27 items	1792-1948

Historical Background: The origins of the Hull Royal Infirmary lay with the issuing of an appeal in May 1782 for the public to establish a general hospital for the poor of Hull. Later that year, the Hull General Infirmary took its first patient into its rented accommodation on George Street. So satisfactory was the response of the public that a site was purchased on Prospect Street, and by 1784 the patients had been transferred from George Street to the new Prospect Street building. In 1884, on its centenary, Queen Victoria confirmed on it the title 'Royal' replacing that of 'General'.

The building was extensively added to over the years, although there was a continual need to ensure there were adequate subscriptions and funds to meet the hospital needs. The hospital was administered by its own Board, with a House Committee to ensure its smooth running. Later, a contributory scheme was developed in order to allow those with moderate means to use the hospital. Whilst in 1930 treatment in the Casualty department was free, all other patients required a subscribers' form of recommendation.

1928 Sir James Reckitt gave his house and some land to the hospital, with the result that in 1931 what became known as the Sutton Branch of the Hospital was opened. During the Second World War the main Infirmary building on Prospect Street suffered substantial damage during the air raids.

Despite rebuilding and remodelling it was becoming clear however, that this site was limiting the hospitals development. So in 1966 the hospital amalgamated with the Western General and moved to a new building on Anlaby Road. This building started in 1962, and was finally completed in 1967, and had been built by Yorke, Rosenberg & Mardall. The old site on Prospect Street is now a shopping centre.

Historical Background: The Hospital for Poor Sick Children was initially established after a letter from the Rev. G T Coster appeared in the local press, in November 1872 and a general meeting at the Town Hall in December of that same year. A house on Storey Street was acquired in 1873, with 30 beds. The first children were admitted in the February of 1874. An out-patients department was added later, in 1876, with another outpatients department opening on The Boulevard in 1888. In 1885, a convalescent home was established in Hornsea. Although land in Hull had been purchased in 1886 for a new structure, it was not until 1891 that saw the opening of the new purpose built 54-patient hospital on Park Street. This was designed by S. Musgrave & W H Bingley, although there were later additions. This increased the number of beds to 150 by 1963. In 1930, the age limits were under 12 for boys and under 14 for girls. The hospital remained on Park Street until the last children were moved into the new Hull Royal Infirmary in 1967. The building then became the administrative headquarters of many departments within the local NHS districts, and was renamed Victoria House

Related material: A number of administrative papers can be found at C DMX/228, annual reports at C DBHG/70-71 and at L.362.78 with letters concerning donations at U DDSY/x2/1/12 and U DDSY/x2/1/28. C DMM/63                      Papers relating to Hull Dock Co.                      1772-1931

Historical Background: The Hull Dock Company had been founded by the 1774 Hull Dock Act. After the opening of the Alexandra Dock, the company's monopoly was broken and operated at a loss for some years. It merged with the North East Railway in 1893.

Their first dock opened in 1778, and was later named Queen's Dock in 1855. It was filled in 1930. By 1786 there were calls for another dock to be built, which resulted in conflict between the company, the corporation, Trinity House and the town's merchants. The new dock (Humber) was finally begun in 1803, completed in 1809 and closed in 1968.

Junction Dock, later Princes dock was begun in 1826 and renamed in 1855 also closing in 1968. Work began on the Railway Dock in 1844 and partly closed in 1968 before fully closing in 1984. Work began on Victoria Dock in 1845 with extension work in 1863. Part of it was filled in the 1970s.

Permission to build the Albert Dock and William Wright Dock was granted by the 1861 Hull Dock Act. Work began in 1863 and completed in 1869. Both docks are still in use, for general cargo and fishing vessels. St Andrew's Dock opened in 1885 and closed in 1982, before opening again in 1991. The King George Dock and Queen Elizabeth Dock were built in 1906 and remain open today.

Related material: Records relating to the docks can be located in the Borough Records (C BR) and the Council Minutes (C TCM). More historical records can be found under C DPD whilst at C CQP can be found various plans submitted to the Quarter Sessions. In addition, other individual records can be located at C DMM/63 and other areas of C DMX, such as C DMX/17/5, 48, 52, 74, 101, 150, 158, 161, 166, 172, 176, 179 and 296. These are the Hull Dock Company receipts and disbursements for the years 1786-1886.

1 item

Biographical Background: Albert Kaye Rollitt was born in Hull in 1842 and would eventually become a solicitor, businessman, ship owner and politician. He was elected a town councillor in 1882, firstly for Queens Ward and then later North Myton. 1883 saw him elected as mayor. In 1886 Rollitt was elected to Parliament as the Conservative MP for South Islington, losing his seat in 1906. In 1892 he promoted a private member's bill for women's suffrage which was only narrowly defeated. Knighted in 1885, Rollitt was married twice, and on his death in 1922, his ashes were returned to Hull.

Related material: At C DMX/68 and C DMX/105 are more letters and papers relating to Rollitt. A photograph of him can be found at C DEHG/1/3/1, whilst details of his service on the council can be found in the council minutes on open access. C DMM/76 Minutes and letters of the Hull Coal Trimming Board c.1947-1966
2 bundles

Historical Background: Coal trimming was a highly specialised job as the trimmers were responsible for loading the coal in a manner which ensured that it did not shift and unbalance the ship. This service benefitted the ship owners as it ensured that the coal would not endanger their vessels. The Hull Coal Trimming Board, like other regional coal trimming boards, was made up of representatives of employers and coal trimmers. It was established under the auspices of the National Dock Labour Board, a scheme within a scheme, and was wound down as the need for coal on ships decreased.
