

U DPO Records of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) 1856-2005

Accession number: 2015/22, 2016/11, 2016/22

Historical Background: The Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) came into being following a partial merger of the County Chief Constables' Club (established 1858) and the Chief Constables' Association of England and Wales (1896). Both organisations had operated primarily for social purposes, with the County Chief Constables' Club providing services for senior officers of County forces, and the Chief Constables' Association providing the same for senior officers of City and Borough Forces.

Although providing social events was the primary goal of these organisations, they also considered legal and operational issues. In order to encourage co-operation between the two separate bodies, in 1918 the country was divided into eight districts, with every Chief Constable, whether of a County, City or Borough force, becoming a member of a District Conference. These conferences were also attended by officials from the Home Office, and members of H. M. Inspectors of Constabulary. A Central Conference of Chief Constables first met in March 1918, with the goal of co-ordinating the District Conferences. Until the establishment of the ACPO the Central and District Conferences were the main communication between the Home Office and Chief Police Officers.

Work towards amalgamation of the two bodies began in 1943, with drafts of rules for the new association exchanged between the two groups and a letter submitted to the Home Office outlining their intentions. However, in 1945 it was resolved that no further action be taken until the end of the Second World War. Following this, little progress was made until Lord Oaksey's committee of general inquiry into the police was appointed in 1948. This prompted the two organisations to complete their amalgamation, forming the Association of Chief Police Officers of England and Wales in July 1948, in order that the committee need only meet with a single representative association for all chief officers. Initially it was known as the Chief Constable's Association and retained distinctions between City, Borough and County forces. In 1952 the distinction between different forces was dropped and the Metropolitan Police became members. From this point the association became the Association of Chief Police Officers of England and Wales (ACPO).

Membership of the ACPO was open to officers of the rank of Assistant Chief Constable and above. ACPO's finances were generated by a combination of funds from the Home Office, individual police authorities, membership subscriptions and proceeds from an annual exhibition.

Following the introduction of the Police Act 1964 ACPO became more involved in facilitating the coordination and cooperation of police forces, as well as influencing policing policy at a national level. The Act also provided the ACPO with greater powers over the local police authorities. Although the ACPO provided advice for chief officers, final decisions regarding operational practice remained with individual Chief Constables. In 1968 the ACPO was reconstituted to establish a Secretariat with a full time general secretary, in order to relieve serving chief officers of the additional responsibilities caused by the increasingly active Association.

In 1970 the Royal Ulster Constabulary became part of the organisation, causing it to become the Association of Chief Police Officers of England, Wales and Northern Ireland. In 1980 the

Hull History Centre: Records of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO)

ACPO led National Reporting Centre was established. Designed to support large scale coordinated responses to national emergencies, both the Centre and ACPO came under public criticism following the police response to the 1984-5 miners' strike due to concerns this was the beginnings of a government controlled national police force, and questions regarding to whom the ACPO was accountable. In 1985 an operational review of the ACPO described its new committee structure, consisting of General Purposes, Crime, Traffic, Technical and Research (TARC) and Training Committees.

Following consultations with corporate identity consultants, ACPO's constitution was formalised in 1990 and the following Statement of Common Purpose and Values was issued:

- The Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) is an independent, professionally led strategic body.
- In the public interest and, in equal and active partnership with Government and the Association of Police Authorities, ACPO leads and coordinates the direction and development of the police service in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.
- In times of national need ACPO, on behalf of all chief officers, coordinates the strategic policing response.

In 1996 ACPO became a private company limited by guarantee, and a separate body, the Chief Police Officers' Staff Association (CPOSA) was established. CPOSA took on responsibility for protecting the interests of its members, allowing the now private ACPO to work solely on behalf of the police service, rather than its staff. During the 1990s, the ACPO became an established voice for the police service within the media.

The committee structure described in 1985 continued until 2000, with individual committees taking responsibility for specific aspects of policing, both operational and administrative. Some of these included sub-committees and/or ad hoc working groups, often consisting of representatives of external bodies such as the Home Office, the Police Federation, the Police Council or the Superintendents' Association. The committees were answerable to the Chief Constables' Council - the senior decision making body within ACPO. The Council was composed of the Chief Constables of the forces in England, Wales and later Northern Ireland, as well as the equivalent ranks in the Metropolitan Police and the City of London Police.

In the year 2000-2001 ACPO's business structure was reorganised into individual 'business areas', replacing the committee structure. Each business area was headed by a chief officer and took responsibility for a number of 'portfolios'.

Many changes took place to the arrangements of committees, sub-committees, business areas and portfolios over time. In 2013 twelve business areas were in operation:

- Crime
- Criminal Justice
- Equality, Diversity & Human Rights
- Finances & Resources
- Futures
- Information Management
- Local Policing & Partnerships
- Performance Management
- Presidential
- Terrorism & Allied Matters
- Uniformed Operations
- Workforce Development

Hull History Centre: Records of the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO)

At the same time, nine National Units, answerable directly to ACPO or one of its Business Areas were also in existence:

- ACPO Terrorism and Allied Matters (TAM)
- National Police Coordination Centre (NPoCC)
- National Wildlife Crime Unit
- National Ballistics Intelligence Service (NABIS)
- Freedom of Information (FOI) Central Referral Unit
- The ACPO Criminal Records Office (ACRO)
- Disaster Victim Identification (DVI)
- ACPO Vehicle Crime Intelligence Services (AVCIS)
- Crime Prevention Initiatives Limited (CPI)

The organisation also featured regional committees, with grouped officers based on the location of their force area. In 1992, the regional structure was as follows:

- Number 1 North West Region (Cheshire, Cumbria, Greater Manchester, Lancashire, Merseyside and Royal Ulster)
- Number 2 North East Region (Cleveland, Durham, Humberside, Northumbria, North Yorkshire, South Yorkshire, West Yorkshire)
- Number 3 Midland Region (Leicestershire, Northamptonshire, Staffordshire, Warwickshire, West Mercia, West Midlands)
- Number 4 East Region (Cambridgeshire, Derbyshire, Lincolnshire, Norfolk, Nottinghamshire, Suffolk)
- Number 5 South East Region (Bedfordshire, Essex, Hampshire, Hertfordshire, Kent, Surrey, Sussex, Thames Valley)
- Number 6 South West Region (Avon and Somerset, Devon and Cornwall, Dorset, Gloucestershire, Wiltshire)
- Number 7 Wales Region (Dyfed Powys, Gwent, North Wales, South Wales)
- Number 8 Metropolitan Region (City of London, Metropolitan)

In the year 2012/13 there was uncertainty over the ability of the police authorities to contribute their allocation of funding to the ACPO. The Home Office therefore increased their financial support that year, on the understanding that the recently appointed Police and Crime Commissioners (PCCs) must agree to further funding being provided the following year. The PCCs commissioned an independent review into the structure, function and value for money of the ACPO. The review's findings were presented to the PCCs in November 2013. The review recommended that although there was a need for a Chief Constable's Council to fulfil many of the functions performed by the existing Council within ACPO, the funding for national units should not pass through a limited company. As a result, ACPO was disbanded on April 1 2015, with many of its responsibilities being divided between the newly established National Police Chiefs Council (NPCC) and the College of Policing.

While the ACPO served England, Wales and in later years Northern Ireland, Scotland had its own equivalent organisation: ACPOS (Association of Chief Police Officers of Scotland), which ceased to operate on the 1st of April 2013, being succeeded by Police Scotland.

Custodial history: The University of Hull was approached by The National Archives who were seeking to relocate the collection on behalf of ACPO. The University accepted the donation alongside with some funding in order to catalogue the collection. The material was transferred to the University collections at Hull History Centre in June 2015.

Further boxes were transferred in May and September 2016.

Description: Much of the content within the collection was created directly by ACPO and includes minutes and administrative papers of the Secretariat, the Council, the Committees and Sub-Committees.

The bulk of the collection consists of subject files which group together correspondence, minute extracts, reports, circulars and other documents relating to specific areas of interest. The topics cover all aspects of policing in the mid to late 20th Century. They include files relating to the introduction of new legislation, police pay, working conditions and pensions (in particular for chief officers), responses to official inquiries, matters relating to police training and procedure, conferences, technological developments, international cooperation and publicity.

The collection also includes detailed records of the National Reporting Centre's coordination of the police response to the 1984 miners' strikes, and the strategy for responding to the 2000 fuel protests.

The collection also includes a selection of reports and publications produced by ACPO, jointly by ACPO and other organisation or by external organisations. Some of these are responses or findings of official inquiries, but some provide information on new technologies, training guidance, benchmarking and quality management or promotional materials. The library materials also include a collection of annual reports from individual forces from the 1990s. Some incomplete runs of early police publications are present, including Essex Constabulary's magazine 'The Truncheon' and the national newspaper 'Police Review and Parade Gossip'. There are also microfilm copies of early editions of the Police Gazette.

The collection also contains original minute books of ACPO's predecessor organisations - the County Chief Constables' Club, the Chief Constables' Association, the County Chief Constables' Conference and the Central and District Conferences. Also included are copies of minutes from external organisations including the Police Foundation, the Police Council and Police Negotiating Board.

The collection consists mainly of hard copy, with a small quantity of video (available digitally). There is a small amount of born digital content, and a collection of microfilm.

Due to the nature of their creation many of the subject files are very fragile and must be handled with care. Re-packaging at the point of cataloguing has sought to minimize risk of lost items resulting from ineffective methods of affixing but care should still be taken when handling.

The vast majority of items in this collection are in English, although there are occasional items in French and other European languages. See the descriptions for more information.

U DPO/8/1	National Reporting Centre and the Union of Miners' Dispute The National Reporting Centre (NRC) was established by the ACPO in 1972 as a tool to assist police forces during major disturbances by providing a centralised intelligence exchange which would enable the mobilisation of officers outside their force area where necessary, in response to increased mobilisation. In March 1984, following years of negotiations between the government, industry officials and trade unionists, the national strike was called, in response to planned pit closures. During the strikes the NRC was under the command of David Hall, Chief Constable of Humberside. Some violent demonstrations took place between police and picketers during the course of the strikes and the police were criticized in the press for their militarized approach and there were accusations of police force run by central government. The strikes ended in March 1985 and it has been argued, accelerated the decline of the coal industry in Britain. The records in this series include reports on the NRC and its operation during and after the strikes, intelligence reports relating to the strikes gathered by the NRC and press cuttings accumulated by the ACPO. 44 items	1981-1986

U DPO/8/2	Fuel Protests 2000 (Operation Echo) A number of protests and blockades took place across the United Kingdom in the year 2000 in response to the high rates of tax on fuel, with involvement by the People's Fuel Lobby (PFL). With origins in protests by lorry drivers in London in 1999, a series of further actions took place at a range of locations. By September, 3000 fuel stations were closed due to insufficient stock. Emergency powers were taken to ensure delivery of fuel to essential services. Later that month, the protests began to end. Afterwards, the Institute of Directors estimated the cost to UK businesses of the action at £1billion. The records in this series reflect the Fuel 2000 Task Force project to respond to the protests, and include information on legal powers to respond to protests, review of police responsibilities, information on publicity and media response and high level plans. 31 items	1998-2000

U DPO/8/3	The Stephen Lawrence Inquiry In April 1993 Stephen Lawrence was murdered in a racially motivated attack in London. A murder investigation was conducted by the Metropolitan Police, which led to six arrests, however only two charges were brought, and both were dropped due to insufficient evidence. A further private prosecution brought by Lawrence's family against five suspects was also unsuccessful, with two charges being dropped, and the remaining three suspects being acquitted. At an inquest into Lawrence's death in 1997, the jury's findings incriminated the five suspects. Growing suspicions arose surrounding the police handling of the case, and an inquiry was ordered by the Home Secretary. The subsequent report was published in 1999. The report found the Metropolitan Police to be an institutionally racist organisation, whose response to the initial incident, along with subsequent actions had jeopardised the successful prosecution of Lawrence's murderers. Two of the original five suspects were imprisoned for the murder of Stephen Lawrence. This series includes reports relating to the inquiry, including submissions from the ACPO and the Metropolitan Police Service 7 items	1997-2000

U DPO/10ACPO Subject Files*1920-2003

The files in this series contain a range of documents grouped by subject. Documents featured include minutes and minute extracts, correspondence, reports and circulars. Although some information regarding contents has been given in the description field, it is not a complete representation of each file's contents.

Many of the files contain fragile papers, and documents such as the minute extracts have the potential to become detached from the main file. As a result, extreme care should be taken when consulting items from within this series.

The files in this series have retained their original titles, and are arranged in the order in which they were deposited, although some have been removed and relocated to other parts of the catalogue. An earlier referencing system is present within this series and can be searched using the previous reference number. The following historic references are present within this series.
